

Four billion people can't get the health care they need.

You can change this.

Everyone has the right to access quality, affordable health care, where and when they need it. But for half the world's population, it's out of reach.

Sightsavers tackles health inequity and eliminates debilitating diseases. Through our work:

- Millions of people have had their sight restored through more than nine million operations for conditions including cataracts and trichiasis
- Thousands of women and girls with disabilities now have access to sexual and reproductive health services
- Millions of people in low and middle income countries are no longer at risk of neglected tropical diseases

We have decades of expertise in developing long-term, sustainable solutions to help achieve universal health coverage. We've made great progress, but there's still a lot of work to do – and we can't do it without you.

Help us achieve transformative change.

We know that with the right investment in health care, we can reduce poverty and disease, as well as improve school attendance and employment rates.

What we've achieved so far:

1.7 billion treatments distributed to protect thousands of communities from neglected tropical diseases

350,000 health, education and social workers have increased capacity to deliver disability-inclusive services

Local health services have been improved through more than 3.3 million training courses for community health workers

We get results.

But don't take our word for it. Ask the World Health Organization, the ministries of health in any of the 34 countries where we work, or USAID; all of whom we've collaborated with to drive progress towards achieving the global Sustainable Development Goals.

Together we can create resilient health systems and make sure everyone, everywhere, can access the health care they need.

Join us to build a healthier, fairer and more equitable society.
